Tito and Marx and Lenin

To the N. Y. Herald Tribune:

The Soviet leaders, having eaten humble pie in Belgrade, are "troubled," according to Allen W. Dulles, director of C. I. A. They are forced into compromises threatening the infallibility of the Marxist-Leninist gospel. But that is not the worst of it. They may be threatened also by that very gospel, to which others may like Tito, claim to be more faithful.

There has never been question that capitalism and socialism can co-exist, indeed, war implies it, but the question is whether different forms of socialism can co-exist. The earthly leaders must inevitably be false to the Utopian promises of Marxism so that one side of the "true doctrine" requires rebellion against them. The Titoists have shown that the authority of Marx and Lenin can be used against the Soviet tyrants.
